

Detection of spatial cluster using nearest neighbour distance

Avner Bar-Hen

Joint work with Mathieu Emily

The aim of this work is to detect spatial clusters through the transformation of nearest neighbour distances between points to probabilities for a Poisson Process (homogeneous or in-homogeneous). Then using results on connectivity of a random interval graph we determine and clusters. Results are applied to a real dataset.